THE WORLDS MOST HAUNTED PLACES

Over the world, there are plenty of spooky places that have reportedly seen unexplained activity or sightings. Here are just a few of the most popular:

ALCATRAZ PRISON, SAN FRANCISCO

Alcatraz is perhaps the most infamous prison in American history. The maximum-security penitentiary system was initially built in the nineteenth-century to house war criminals.

Later, in the early 1930s, it was converted into a federal prison, where the worst felons in the country were sent to do their time. Even before Alcatraz closed in 1963, guards had already reported hearing strange noises and witnessing supernatural sights in the middle of the night. Since then, visitors and rangers have continued to claim the prison is haunted by the spirits of former inmates.

CHATEAU FRONTENAC, CANADA

Visit a haunted hotel by stopping in the Fairmont's Chateau Frontenac in Quebec City, where two ghosts have reportedly never checked out.

Be on the lookout for a woman in a white nightgown who likes to pay guests a visit while they're sleeping, or the 17th-century governor of New France, Louis de Buade de Frontenac, who died there before marrying his fiancée and spends the evenings looking for her in the halls of the hotel.

TOWER OF LONDON, UK

The popular Tower of London is not only one of the city's top attractions, but it's also considered the most haunted. Since it was founded in 1067, the tower has had its fair share of ghastly happenings. In 1483, the two young princes were infamously murdered in the Tower. Their shadowy figures—holding hands—are a relatively common sight in the White Tower.

MONTE CRISTO HOMESTEAD, NSW

Considered Australia's most haunted house, the Monte Cristo Homestead—built in 1884—has had its fair share of weird happenings throughout the years. There have been reported sightings of a woman in a dress walking along the veranda, which just so happens to be where a former maid of the household once fell. If you're brave enough, you sleep at the house. There's a small gift waiting for you if you make it through the night.

VALLEY OF THE KINGS, EGYPT

We've seen Mummies bestow nasty curses on treasure hunters in films, but it seems Hollywood didn't invent this concept. The Valley of the Kings is the burial place of Egypt's highest nobility, including that of King Tutankhamun. Over years, the untimely deaths of several of King Tut's discoverers have been attributed by some to the curse.

LARNACH CASTLE, NEW ZEALAND

Built between 1871 and 1887, Larnach Castle was built to serve as the residence of William Larnach, a prominent local politician. Included in the grandeur of the home is a 3000-square-foot ballroom, which was gifted to his beloved daughter Kate on her 21st birthday. She tragically died of typhoid at age 26 and is said to still haunt the ballroom.
